Canoe Journey to Bella Bella

The Warm Springs Canoe Family made an historic journey this summer. The N’chi Wanapum family traveled to Bella Bella, British Columbia this July.

“With a long learning experience,” Jazmine Ike Lopez was saying recently. “You learn the old ways of your own tribe, and the ways of other tribes. You learn to work together as a family and a community.”

Jazmine will be a senior this year at Madras High School. She traveled this summer with the Canoe Family, reporting along the way for KSWS where she is working this summer.

This was Jazmine’s fourth time traveling with the Canoe Family. One of her favorite memories from this journey is the eagles and other wildlife around Bella Bella.

She saw more than 30 eagles in one spot. “There was an island there, Eagle Island, where you can go and look for feathces,” Jazmine said. She found two eagle feathers. The family also saw blue whales during the journey.

The Warm Springs Canoe Family this year partnered with the Niqquaq family, sharing a canoe. There were 14 pullers for Warm Springs, and 25 for Niqquaq. The families camped out along the way.

This trip was much longer than previous journeys, taking about a month to complete. This journey included crossing the Olympics, the Salish Sea, and the Strait of Georgia. The journey took a week, and was an impetion for the family to continue the experience.

Carbon project progress

The team working on the carbon sequestration project is making steady progress. They received approval last week from Tribal Council to move on to the next phase of the plan. This could lead to the actual marketing of carbon sequestration credits by the time next year. There is a potential for significant revenue from the sale of the credits. And with this comes the need to plan carefully as to how this future revenue might be allocated, said Councilman Orvie Danzuka.

Carbon sequestration is a new market, not only for the tribes but for everyone. So there are questions that can only be answered through experience and over time. Meanwhile, care and attention to detail are needed in all aspects of the program, from implementation to eventual use of revenue, Danzuka said.

Councilman Danzuka works in the Natural Resources Branch, and is a member of the team working on carbon sequestration. “I think distribution could benefit the tribes,” he said. “I look at it as a win-win situation.” There would be revenue, plus benefits to the reservation forest land, he said.

Said ORVIE DANZUKA:

Summer Night in Simnasho

The Hot Summer Nights Powwow this year in Simnasho turned out to be one to remember. That evening the skies opened up, changing everyone’s plans.

As a guest of Charles and Vicky Littleleaf, my girlfriend Darlene and I were honored with the use of their tipi for shelter during the event. The weather was promising while Charles and I erected the lodge, warm with a soft breeze. But shortly thereafter the weather took a turn in the opposite direction. Dark blue grey clouds came in and consumed the encampment. Then came the wind, rain and hail one-inch in diameter.

Thunder and lightning arrived with an incredible frequency, flashing all around on every ho-

Ways to improve water use

Only a few customers of the Warm Springs water system pay for the water they use. These customers include the enterprises and local businesses. The Warm Springs K-8 Academy will be the newest paying customer on the system.

Most of the water users—the residential customers—pay no fee for water. This results in large wasting of domestic water, because there is no consequence for over-use.

A recent study shows that the average connection on the Warm Springs domestic water system uses many times more water than an average household. A typical household in the U.S. uses about 3,400 gallons of water a month, while the average in Warm Springs is 39,400 gallons.

The tribes spend close to $1 millidon an expenditure each year from the general fund of about $50,000 for the operation of the water/sewer sys-

Seasonal Reads: Bringing New Books to Kids

Every Wednesday during the month of August, parents and guardians can help move their children toward readiness for kindergarten. The Warm Springs Community School (WSCS) will be hosting the Rady to Read program: More books and more reading strategies when reading with your children.

during August, the Warm Springs Community School will be hosting the Rady to Read program: More books and more reading strategies when reading with your children.

The Warm Springs Community School, celebrating its 49th year of providing education to the Warm Springs First Nations youth, is pleased to announce the launch of the Rady to Read program: More books and more reading strategies when reading with your children.

Ready to Read is held every Wednesday from 3:30-6:30 during the school’s Community Center social hall.

Parents and guardians of children ages 3-5 invited to come and eat a light snack, get two free books, and learn reading strategies.

Ready to Read will give away two new books to kids every week, except for the last Wednesday of the month when they give away three books.

“Our goal is to have parents and guardians use the different strategies with all of the books they will receive over the course of the month, and books they may already have at home,” said teacher Aedie Smith, who is coordinating Ready to Read.

Parents are encouraged to read to their children, and books will mirror those used in the Head Start Creative Curriculum.

One hour prior to the show. Tickets for this show are $10.

On Saturday, August 16, the group Proyecto X and The Indian Head Casino host a nachos bar, desserts, from 5-9 p.m.

"Our goal is to have parents and guardians get their children ready to start building the reading foundation at home, so the kids are ready to start reading upon entering kindergarten. We want to give parents reading strategies that can be used with their pre-school age kids."

Lady Warriors travel to World tourney in Hawaii

By Patti Tanewasha
Spilyay Tymoo

The Lady Warriors basketball team played in the World Youth Basketball Tournament. They had the opportunity to play on Big Island, Kona, Hawaii, in the 13-14 age division. They played the Eastbay team from California for second place on Tuesday of this week (after prior deadlines for publication). The team resulted in last place of the tournament. One group flew out on Sunday, July 28. And group flew out on Wednesday, July 30.

Sharon Williams, 22, is a graduate of Madras High School. Before joining Recreation, she worked as a volunteer at Utility. She is liking her new job as Recreation secretary. "I’ve really liked working with our summertime visitors," Joy says.

From other countries had the opportunity to see Warm Springs tribal members present their stories. Before the tournament the Lady Warriors learned to sing, and to dance the Butterfly Dance. Many would show up to practice the Butterfly songs, and dance hours before the regular basketball practices.

For Cultural Exchange Night the ladies wore wing dresses and moccasins, and had their hair braided and tied up in mohawks (other fun), ready to bring a part of Warm Springs to Hawaii and share with other parts of the world.

From some on the Lady Warriors this would be their first time traveling outside of Oregon.

It took a lot of hard work, many late night practices, and support from family and friends. It was a new and exciting experience for the Lady Warriors, learning about possible college basketball opportunities, making new friends and seeing the beautiful land of Hawaii.

The team is returning this week from the trip. "Aloha!"

This is a problem for various reasons. For instance, capital improvements to the system are hard to accomplish, as most of the budget goes toward operation. Another issue is one of fairness. Some households use an average amount of water, while others are using much more than average. And the tribal general fund subsidizes the entire operation. In other words: Some households use the system much more than others, and yet the cost is shared evenly, which is not exactly fair to those who use a reasonable amount of water.

Households that over-use water might not be aware of the situation, as they might not be aware of leaky pipes. Most of the residential units on the reservation have no water meter, so there is no way to tell how much water is going into the household. And without a meter, a leaky pipe can go undetected for years. The solution would be to install water meters for all connections, and then have someone check the meters to see how much water each unit is using. This could be done through a grant from the USDA.

A second step in the process would be to develop a rate system based on the amount of water that each household is using. This would be a major change, but there are ways to make the change as easy as possible. For instance, the rate could be zero dollars for households that use an average amount of water. The cost might be $1 a month for each thousand gallons a household uses above the average. And there might be exemptions for households that show they cannot afford another monthly bill.

Tribal Council heard this information during a meeting last week with tribal planner Lonny Macy, engineer Travis Wells, water/wastewater engineer Roy Spino, and economic and financial analyst Ray Bartlett. Bartlett said the USDA would be a great place to look for grant funding to get this project under way. As a side benefit, this program would create some jobs, as people would be needed to install the meters and read them. A person trained in this kind of work can find a job most anywhere, as all communities have water systems. The billing and collection system would also require new employees. Tribal Council will meet again on this matter on August 19.

The Early Childhood Education Center has a well-kept garden in the courtyard area of the building. Despite the threats of interest in trust allocations, the garden has thrived and is a peaceful oasis for the children. Here is a list of current garden workers and their recent activities:

- Gardening Enthusiast: Betty Harmon, has been volunteering at the garden since last spring. She has been planting, weeding, and watering the plants. She reports that the garden is growing well, with a variety of flowers and vegetables.

- Garden Coordinator: Sarah Davis, has been overseeing the garden since the beginning of the season. She has arranged for the purchase of new plants and has been keeping track of the garden's progress. She encourages students to participate in the garden's maintenance and to learn about gardening.

- Garden Assistant: Alex Johnson, has been helping with the garden tasks. He enjoys learning new gardening techniques and sharing them with others. He has been assisting in planting new seeds and in maintaining the garden's cleanliness.

- Garden Sponsor: Mr. T, has been providing financial support for the garden. He has donated funds to purchase new gardening tools and seeds. He is a strong supporter of the Early Childhood Education Center and its commitment to providing a healthy environment for the children.

- Garden Advisor: Dr. Green, has been providing expert advice on garden maintenance and plant care. He has been visiting the garden regularly and has been addressing any challenges that arise.

The Early Childhood Education Center is proud of its garden and its dedicated team of workers. The garden is not only a place of beauty but also a space for learning and growth.

Native Aspirations finishing for summer

Ninety-six young people spent the summer at various jobs around the reservation. They worked as part of the six-week Native Aspirations program.

Most of the workers will be finishing the program this week, said Caroline Cruz, the tribal health liaison. Some of the students who started a little late will be finishing up next week, she said.

Part of the summer work program involved education and training, two days a week. The students are doing the final training this week.

Then there will be a survey to learn what the students and the employers thought of the program, Cruz said.

The weekly training was required for the high school-age students. There were also ten college students who participated in the program.

The training sessions focused on a variety of topics. For instance, the training this week is in regard to energy drinks and their side effects. Drinking one energy drink can be like rating 80 candy bars, in terms of what it does to your metabolism.

During an earlier education session, Jefferson Gaines of the Warm Springs Canoe Family gave a history of the tribes. He talked about the tribal Constitution, the Treaty of 1855, Tribes Council, and other aspect of the tribes.

Another training was on cross-cultural education.

In this exercise, groups of students were asked to invent a culture. The premise was that present civilization and its history had been lost. Students were then asked to present their culture.

Another of the earlier training sessions was on personal finances.
