Rare view of history at Archives

The Smithsonian Archives collection is extraordinary. They have a Wasco wedding veil from the 1850s, adorned with Chinese coins dating from sometime between 1664 and 1774.

There is a dark wooden bowl with an ancient design of faces with no mouths. And a horse whip with elk and other engravings that appear to tell a story.

There are very old beaded items, rare baskets, baby boards and moccasins, tools, arrow heads, regalia and photographs.

The collection includes hundreds of pages of 19th century written documents of Kiksht translations.

In September a team from Warm Springs Culture and Heritage visited the Smithsonian Archives in Washington, D.C. They spent a week making an inventory of the Archives' Native American high plateau items.

Culture and Heritage director Val Switzler, language teacher Pam Cardenas, Lori

Pam Cardenas examines a saddle at the Smithsonian Archive; at right, very old Chinese coins adorn a Wasco wedding veil.

Switzler and Shayleen Macy made the trip, with linguist Nariyo Kono.

When they first arrived at the Archives, the curator brought out one box of items that were identified as Wasco.

Val then provided a list of other names that the tribes were known by in the past. A linguist at the Archives soon returned with two and a half cartloads of boxes.

Val explains that part of the Smithsonian collection is a legacy from the mid- to late-19th Century, when people were thinking the Indian culture might soon disappear. Museum collectors, anthropologists, photographers and linguists visited the tribes on the reservation, at the river and other areas, purchasing and trading for items from the tribal members.

Now the Smithsonian Archives collection is an endless source of interest. The Warm Springs team spent eight hours a day for a week going through the boxes.

They helped the Smithsonian archives staff identify some of items. The kupn handles, for instance, were a mystery, as was the horse head regalia.

At one point Pam was going through old photographs when she recognized a picture of her grandmother's sister Emma. In the picture Emma, born in 1865, is 8 or 9 years old.

Study to look at water situation

The Confederated Tribes are getting ready to conduct an assessment of the domestic water system on the reservation. The study will be funded through a grant from the USDA.

The hope is that the assessment will be done by the end of this year, said Lonny Macy, tribal planner.

The goal of this project is eventually to install water meters at all residential and commercial buildings on the reservation.

This would create a great savings in water usage on the reservation. The meters will allow tribal Utilities to identify where the leaks are in the system, and which households may be over-using water.

And the amount of leakage and over-use is significant. A study last year looked at the amount of water produced at the water treatment plant, in comparison to the number of water hook-ups on the reservation.

Justice grant helps police, VOCS

The Confederated Tribes will receive a grant of more than $830,000, to be used for Public Safety and the Victims of Crime Services.

The Warm Springs Police Department will use some of the funding to buy new police cars, said Stan Suenaga, general manager of tribal Public Safety.

Some of the current police cars have many miles on them, he said. The budget limit at Public Safety would make purchasing new vehicles difficult; so news of the grant award was especially welcome, Suenaga said.

More than $300,000 of the total grant award will go to the Victims of Crime Services. This will help fund positions at VOCS, and services to crime victims.

The grant process was a coordinated effort, Suenaga said. Public Safety worked with Caroline Cruz at Health and Human Services, tribal prosecutor Nancy Seyler, and Janelle Wallulatum at VOCS. The team submitted the grant request back in January.

The grant comes from the U.S. Justice Department, which awarded more than $97 million to Native American tribes during the latest grant cycle.

Five tribes in Oregon received funding under this program. The Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians received more than $1.2 million. Warm Springs received the second largest grant among the Oregon tribes.

The Coquilles received $683,439; the Klamath Tribes received $450,000; and the Grand Ronde received $101,969.

This grant program is to address disproportionate rates of violence and victimization in Native Americans communities.

Funding for geothermal research

Warm Springs Power and Water Enterprises is beginning the second phase of a geothermal research project.

Power and Water, and the Confederated Tribes learned last week they have received a grant in the amount of $580,000 to pursue the research.

The grant comes from the Office of Indian Energy and Economic Development.

Jim Manion, general manager of Power and Water, explains that the research area is near Kah-Nee-Ta and the Mutton Mountains.

The first phase of the project involved analysis of soil and other features of the area, to determine whether a geothermal resource may exist.

This study proved positive, leading to the second phase, which will involve drilling a deeper well and more detailed analysis.

Eventually, Power and Water could develop a small or moderate sized generating facility. The facility would be in the 3 to 15 watt range, compared to, for instance, the tribes' Re-Reg dam, which is 20 megawatts.

A state energy policy requires utilities to include a certain amount of renewable energy sources in their portfolios, which makes the Warm Springs geothermal project potentially lucrative for the tribes.

Chamber's Senior of the Year

The Madras-Jefferson County Chamber of Commerce named Warm Springs language teacher Suzie Slockish the Senior Citizen of the Year at their awards banquet, held at the Erickson Aircraft Collection museum.

Suzie has been a language teacher at Culture and Heritage for more than 20 years.

She learned the Ichishkeen language growing up from her parents, Ellen and Sam Squiemphen, and from grandparents. She grew up and lives in Simnasho.

Warm Springs businesswoman Aurolyn Stwyer nominated Suzie to the Chamber for

"A long time preserver of the culture of her people," is the dedication statement on the Senior Citizen of the Year award.

Suzie shares her time, and knowledge of traditional language and foods, beadwork and sewing.

Tribal update from Council Chairman

Dear Tribal Members:

Itukdi wigwa ku nix pachwai. Over the past few weeks, the Tribal Council has been discussing the 2016 proposed budget.

This year, pre-budget meetings were held to provide Tribal Members with additional opportunities to provide input and ask questions.

This was the first time we’ve done this, and appreciate the feedback that we received through the process. As outlined in the Tribal Appropriation Ordinance, the proposed budget must be posted by October 1.

Earlier in the week, the Tribal Council has adopted a proposed 2016 budget that will be posted this week for Tribal Members to review.

The Districts will hold meetings to provide further opportunity for Tribal Members to review and comment on the proposed budget.

I highly encourage Tribal Members to review the budget before attending your district meeting.

District meetings are scheduled as follows: Agency District, October 26; Seekseequa District, October 27; Simnasho District meeting date still pending. Dinner will start at 6 p.m. followed by the meeting at 7. As per Ordinance 67, Tribal Council must adopt a final budget no later than December 1.

Hunting season

Another important decision that Tribal Council made recently was the adoption of the 2015 Reservation Hunting Season Regulations.

Deer season runs from October 3-25 and elk season is open November 7-29. Additional hunting seasons have been opened for bear, cougar, big horn sheep and birds. There are specific bag limits for each tribal member.

I encourage you to contact Natural Resources for information on the hunting regulations, and to obtain your hunting tags. As always, hunters should practice safe firearm handling.

Oregon Tribes

I continue to participate in the Oregon Tribes meetings held several times annually.

One of the items that discussed in June was Measure 91, legalizing marijuana for recreational use in Oregon.

The discussion provided opportunity for Tribes to share how they are approaching the legalization and potential impacts to the sovereignty for respective Nations.

Additional discussions held since have been on coal and fossil fuel rail transport through the Columbia River basin and along the Deschutes River.

Tribes have been reaching out to Governor Kate Brown to share concerns and opposition to fossil fuels transportation along these critical waterways.

Native Youth issues were also discussed and this will be a topic at the next meeting.

In closing, I’d like to welcome two individuals who have recently joined the Tribe in key positions.

The first is Glendon Smith, who Council appointed to the position of Secretary-Treasurer/CEO; and Alyssa Macy, hired as the Executive Deputy Director. Welcome to you both and we look forward to working with you.

Thank you,
Austin Greene Jr., Tribal Chairman

Flu shots are available

Coming to Light at PAC

The Madras Performing Arts Center will host a free showing of the documentary Coming to Light: Edward S. Curtis and the North American Indians. The showing be at 4 p.m. this Saturday, Oct. 3.

Created by Native American director Anne Peacemaker, the documentary tells the dramatic story of the life of self-taught photographer Edward S. Curtis, who spent 30 years photographing scores of North American tribes at the turn of the century.

As he documented the lives of Native people through intimate portraits, scenic tableaux and quiet studies, Curtis found his own life forever changed.

Curtis' 20-volume collection of photos includes pictures of Wishram, Yakama, Nez Perce, Umatilla and Klamath people. In the movie, Hopi, Navajo, Cupig, Blackfeet, Piegan, Suquamish and Kwakiuti people, many related to those in his photos, tell stories about the people in the photographs.

The movie premiered at Sundance in 2000, and was an Academy Award finalist for best feature documentary in 2001.

Coming to Light presents a complex, dedicated, flawed life, and explores many of the ironies inherent in Curtis's story, the often controversial nature of his romantic images, and the value of the photographs to Indian people and to all Americans today.

Madras Performing Arts Center director Shannon Ahern partnered with the A6

Galery and Studio in Bend, and the Museum at Warm Springs to bring the documentary to Madras.

The A6 Gallery has organized a two-month exhibit on Curtis, featuring over 50 of his original photographs, move showings and speakers, including Elizabeth Woody. The A6 Gallery show runs through October 31.

Ventures to host information meeting

Please join Warm Springs Ventures in the Warm Springs Community Center social hall next Tuesday, Oct. 6, or Wednesday, Oct. 7, for a discussion about tribal economic development opportunities with cannabis. Ventures staff and board will discuss draft language for a possible tribal referendum vote this fall or winter. The meeting will not address the issue of personal use or criminal laws on the Warm Springs Reservation. That issue will be addressed at a later date. Ventures will share what information they have been able to gather, followed by a question and answer session. Your opinion is very important, Ventures welcomes your input. If you have any questions please call 541-553-3565.

4-H preparing for Science Day event

Warm Springs 4-H will host and present the Annual 4-H National Youth Science Day on Friday, Oct. 9. The day starts at 10 a.m., and is held in the OSU basement kitchen at the Education building. Youth in grades fourth and older are welcome to register to participate. October 9 is a statewide in-service day, and there is no school.

This year's project is called Motion Com-motion. This will be a physics-based lesson exploring the effects of forces such as speed, reaction time, and gravity of objects in motion. The final discussion will look at applying the experimental data to real world issues, such as distracted driving. Please call 541-553-3238 to register. A light and healthy snack will be provided. It is not necessary to be enrolled in 4-H to participate. Call the above number for any questions as well.

Film explores reservation life

The Bend Film Festival will show Songs My Brother Taught Me on Friday, Oct. 9, at the Madras Performing Arts Center. The show starts at 6 p.m., and admission is free.

Songs My Brothers Taught Me is a 2015 American drama film written and directed by Chloé Zhao. It is Zhao's debut feature film.

The film is set on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, and explores the bond between a brother and his younger sister.

Here is a part of the director's statement:

Songs My Brothers Taught Me is a contemplation of the time I spent on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation during the four years of making this film.

One of the most common questions people ask when they hear about some of the difficulties facing Pine Ridge is "Why don't they just leave? If life is hard, why don't they just leave the reservation and go somewhere else?"

When considering how frequently I have moved around

Scene from Songs My Brother Taught Me.

in my own life, I must confess that at times I have often wondered the same thing. I was born in Beijing and left home when I was 14, and have been moving from place to place ever since.

As a result, there isn't one particular place in the world from which I cannot just uproot myself and leave behind. 'Home', to me, feels like only a concept, and I find myself often exploring its meaning in my films and writing.

During my time on Pine Ridge, as I became friends with some of the Lakota people living there, I became increasingly intrigued and almost envious of the deep connection they have to their homes, families, communities and their land.

This bone-deep attachment also has its consequences, and over time I also became aware of the various struggles and isolation they face because of it.

I found this very simple question has an increasingly complicated answer, one that I find difficult to express in words. So in many ways I made Songs My Brother Taught Me to explore this question—How do you leave the only place you've ever known?

Set against the backdrop of the Badlands and the Great Plains of South Dakota, Songs is also a kind of poem dedicated to my love for this wild, magnificent, yet marginalized piece of the American west... We are completely indebted to our cast and friends on Pine Ridge, most of them were acting for the first time, and were born, raised and residing on the reservation. They trusted us completely, and welcomed us into their homes and their lives. The film would certainly not have been possible without their kindness and support. This trust touched on every aspect of the shoot. Sadly, during production, the childhood home of one of our leads (13-year-old Jashaun) was burned down in a snow-storm. After much reflection, and talking with Jashaun and her family, I decided to rewrite the script and reshoot scenes, incorporating this event into her character's story. We filmed Jashaun seeing the ruins for the first time, and what was at first supposed to be a brief pickup, developed into something more as Jashaun decided to keep going, searching in the ashes as she tried to recover her things that were lost in the fire....

Jayson Smith/Spilyay

Water: meters project

(Continued from page 1) The ratio was 39,400 gallons of water per hookup each month on the reservation; compared to the average U.S. household usage of 5,000 gallons per month.

That is not to say the average residence on the reservation uses eight times as much water as the national average. Instead, the number indicates significant leaks in the system, though some residents may be over-using water, especially in the summer. With no water meters, there is no cost for residential water usage among reservation households. For this reason there is no incentive to conserve water.

The tribes may look at implementing a water rate system, on a scale based on usage. Currently, the Confederated Tribes spend more than $1 million per year on domestic water. This money comes from the general fund. There are some paying customers, such as the casino, museum and commercial buildings. But this covers only about 15 percent of overall water cost on the reservation. The water meter-water rate project would relieve the expense to the general fund, and would take pressure off the water treatment plant, saving money on repairs and extending its years of operation.

W.S. 4-H needs you

This Thursday, October 1 is the official beginning of a new 4-H year.

We are accepting annual enrollment for 4-H, as well as seeking to grow our adult volunteer leader corp.

Youth ages fourth-grade and up, or age 9 by September 1, are eligible to sign up. Forms are available online or at the OSU Extension Office in Warm Springs.

Adult volunteer leaders are the people that make 4-H happen in the community. Do you have an area of interest that you would like to share with kids?

Are you a parent who would like to make some cool stuff happen for your own kid? Volunteer to lead a club!

The 4-H Office is here to help you be successful.

Please call 541-553-3238 or come by the office to discuss your ideas. Clubs can be formed around nearly any subject matter, from livestock to science to art to community service and leadership, to sports, outdoors and culture.

Youth in 4-H must submit new applications each year, as do adult leaders. Adult leaders must also submit to a criminal background check at entrance in to the program, and every other year thereafter. Training is required, and it is recommended that leaders update their training every three years.

Have kids younger than fourth grade who want to participate? Start a Cloverbud Club! The Cloverbud model introduces kids in grades K-3 to projects but without the commitment of a full-on 4-H project.

Check out and like our Facebook page: Warm Springs 4-H Oregon

Fruit Loop Tour

The Fall Fruit Loop Tour returned to Parkdale and the Hood River area in September. Tribal members endured a bit of weather but came away with beautiful peaches, pears and apples.

Following the tour, OSU Extension Master Food Preserver Rosanna Sanders offered a pie filling canning class, where peaches were turned into delicious canned pie filling to use for fall and winter baking.

We appreciate the donations from Composite Products and Power and Water Enterprises that helped with expenses. We are working on a new tour for fall of 2016 to Kimberly, which will include a tour of ceded lands.

Our next Food Preservation Class is salmon canning, and will be on October 21 from 1-4 p.m. Please call the office at 541-553-3238 to sign up.

Duck City

I hear over here in Duck City Eugene, Oregon, that Marcus Mariota will be the next Joe Montana.

He is now in the NFL, and quarterback for the Tennessee Titans.

In his first game in the NFL, Mariota and the Titans beat Tampa Bay 42-14.

We all, over here in Duck City wish Marcus the best in the NFL. Some say he might be even better than Joe Montana. We he doesn't get hurt in the NFL.

Award recognizes CRITFC fisheries work

The Coalition of Columbia Basin Tribes and First Nations received the William E. Ricker Resource Conservation Award from the American Fisheries Society at its 2015 Annual Meeting in Portland.

The Ricker Award is given to an individual or organization for outstanding accomplishments or long-term contributions that advance aquatic conservation at a national or international level.

The Coalition of Columbia Basin Tribes is a group of 15 Columbia River Basin Tribes and Canadian First Nations that has provided significant leadership in creating a common vision for restoring ecosystem function and resiliency to the Columbia River watershed.

into re-negotiations of the Columbia River Treaty between Canada and the U.S. will help integrate ecosystem function as a co-equal Treaty objective in these negotiations. Their efforts include development of white papers, formal and informal meetings, and documentation of traditional knowledge.

“The tribes and first nations have elevated the dialog as it relates to indigenous peoples’ cultural, harvest, and spiritual values, many of which were lost with river development for power and flood management,” said American Fisheries Society president Donna Parrish.

Founded in 1870, the American Fisheries Society is the world’s oldest and largest fisheries science society.

Signature gatherers near target number

There is a voting process that allows for the amendment of the Constitution of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

The process involves collecting a certain number of signatures, which are then presented to the Warm Springs BIA Agency superintendent.

Working with the BIA regional office, the superintendent then determines whether a sufficient number of valid signatures have been presented. If indeed the target number has been met, then the BIA will conduct a referendum on the proposed amendment.

The referendum would be a BIA secretarial election, meaning the eligible voters would 18 or over. Tribal elections are for people 21 and over, or married.

A group of tribal members have been collecting signatures since December of last year, seeking a vote on whether to amend the tribal constitution.

The proposed changes include, for instance, eliminating the three Tribal Council election districts. Council members instead would be elected by the membership at large, rather than by district. This is one of the proposed changes under the petition.

Mike Clements, Wendell Jim and Sal Sahme have been the main signature gatherers. They have been gathering signatures for a few hours each day at places such as the Warm Springs Market, and on the sidewalk area outside the Post Office.

They now are getting close to the point when they will present the signature petition sheets to Warm Springs Agency Superintendent John Halliday.

Last year, when they first began this process, they met with Superintendent Halliday regarding the number of signatures needed to call for an amendment vote.

The number is one-third of the total number of eligible tribal member voters.

At that time the number of eligible voters was about 3,600, so the number of signatures needed would be about 1,200. As of last week, the petition signature gatherers had collected about 1,100 signatures.

They have until December 4 to present the signatures to the superintendent, but they plan on presenting them sooner, said Mike Clements.

The process then calls for posting the signatures in a public place for 15 days.

Then, If enough valid signatures are verified, the BIA would conduct an election within 45 days.

On Council agenda

The Tribal Council worked on the 2016 budget proposal through September, and was expecting to post the document this week.

The Agency District then set a meeting on the proposal for Monday, Oct. 26. Seekseequa set their meeting for Tuesday, Oct. 27. The Simnasho District date was not yet available. The budget has to be finalized by Dec. 1.

Council last week discussed some other upcoming items on their October agenda.

Council will meet with the Jefferson County School District officials in October to discuss the education memorandum of understanding. The current agreement is set to expire next summer.

Council will meet in mid-October with Oregon Department of Transportation officials to discuss the use of the Highway 26 Safety Corridor funding, already appropriated.

Council has their regular meeting on the first Monday of the month, October 5, with BIA and Office of Special Trustee updates; Realty items; conference calls, and a meeting with the Education Committee.

On Tuesday, Oct. 6, Council is scheduled to meet with Utilities director Don Courtney regarding the water meter and other Utilities projects.

Housing will give and update on October 13.

Council has a meeting with CRITFC on Oct. 22-23.

River housing discussion at Lone Pine

The Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission recently hosted a visit to the Line Pine in-lieu site.

CRITFC chairwoman Kathryn ‘Kat’ Brigham, and Yakama Nation Fish and Wildlife Committee member Wilbur Slockish Sr. met with Congressman Earl Blumenauer at the fishing site.

The visit provided an opportunity for the tribal representatives to share their concerns about housing needs and public safety issues at the tribal fishing sites along the Columbia River.

A resident at Lone Pine from a previous tour shared the reality of living at the site, which lacks proper services for long-term stays.

Photos/article courtesy CRITFC

The CRITFC leadership shared how tribal members are contending with substandard living conditions, as a consequence of displacement by the construction and operation of the federal Columbia River dams.

They reiterated the tribes’ position that as long as the dams exist, the federal government has the continuing obligation to address the impacts caused by the dams, including the loss of villages and homes along the river.

The visit closed with a discussion on how the tribes and Congress might work together to address these problems.

Students continue on path of “learning” vs. “doing”

In Jefferson County, education is not about getting an “A”, it’s about getting the knowledge. For the past six years, Madras High School teachers and students have been moving towards a more meaningful teaching and learning system to help students graduate with the skills and knowledge they need to be successful in college, careers and life. This year, all grade levels K through 8 will begin to prepare for the new standards-based grading system that measures how well they understand subjects instead of how many assignments they complete. This is a big shift in education across the country and JCSD 509J has been leading the charge for Oregon schools.

“We’re no longer just measuring what students are ‘doing’,” said District Instructional Coach Sue Taylor. “We’re looking at what each student is actually learning and what they need to help them graduate for a successful future, whether that’s college or a career or both.”

According to JCSD 509J Superintendent Rick Molitor, the high school goals have been highly ambitious, which is a good thing, but the District team is continuously learning and adjusting to improve student success.

“We’re moving to a more versatile grading system that still keeps the bar high and encourages growth,” said Molitor.

According to Josh Hocker, MHS senior and student advisor to the school board, the more flexible version of standards-based grading is a good compromise.

“Standards-based grading is a good thing because it allows teachers to hold students more accountable and it helps prepare us better for college, but now we don’t have to pass every standard to pass a class,” said Hocker.

Students in primary grades are beginning to prepare for standards-based grading which will be in full swing by the 2016/2017 school year.

School Board kicks off school year with special training

Recently the JCSD 509J School Board participated in a training to strengthen their skills as education champions and confirm their roles and responsibilities as board members. The training, sponsored by the Oregon School Board Association, includes a guided discussion of the roles played by board members and the District administration. OSBA also reviewed school board research, best practices, and protocols, district policies to shape understanding of these critical roles and their impact on student achievement.

“We talked about who does what and why, and how we can work together to better support students and prepare them for the future,” said JCSD 509J School Board Chair Tom Norton.

Tasty Trivia

Did you know that during the 2014/2015 school year our Food Services team served more than:

- 648,000 meals
- 1 million fruit cups
- 600,000 cartons of milk
- 51,000 slices of pizza

“We have an amazing Food Services Team,” said JCSD 509J Superintendent Rick Molitor. “They follow an incredible amount of guidelines to make sure our students are getting well-balanced, nutritional meals and they do a great job.”

Counseling events for Recovery Month

by Sarah Wolfe
Warm Springs Prevention

National Recovery Month is a national observance held every September to educate Americans that substance use treatment and mental health services.

Recovery Month celebrates the gains made by those in recovery.

Warm Springs Community Counseling celebrated Recovery with an early Recovery Powwow on July 21.

Ten Guiding Butterflies/ Mighty Warriors, and many other Warm Springs community members and employees attended the Spirit of Giving Conference in Portland.

Keynote speakers included Eduardo Duran and Don Coyhis, both recognized nationally in Indian Country.

Tribal Councilman Raymond Tsumpti Sr. spoke on the Tribal Leaders Panel. At closing Tribal Council Chairman Eugene Greene Jr. shared his testimony.

Don Coyhis commended Warm Springs tribal leaders for sober leadership.

After the conference Carlos Riveiro, present White Bison executive director, brought the Sacred Hoop to Warm Springs for the Back to School Barbecue and a one day Recovery Event.

Warm Springs conference participants pose with keynote speaker Don Coyhis and the Sacred Hoop. Not pictured are Tribal Council Chairman Eugene Green Jr., Annie Kalama, Charlotte Pitt and Guy Wallulatum.

becue Tribal Councilman Kahseuss Jackson welcomed Carlos and the Sacred Hoop to Warm Springs.

The Sacred Hoop was carried around the Warm Springs k-8 School by four Warm Springs Women in Recovery. Guy Wallulatum and Dallas Winishut Jr. shared songs. Quartz Creek shared both an honor and round dance.

During this event, powerful testimonies of recovery and healing were shared by guests Carlos and Candida. There was also a sobriety countdown and then the event closed with a talking circle.

We were happy to have Brothers and Sisters in recovery join us from Klamath Falls and NARA.

The Guiding Butterflies and Mighty Warriors Adult Class will begin again this Thursday, Oct. 1, and will meet Thursdays from 1-3 p.m. at the Counseling Center.

There is a trip planned for October 24 to the 2015 Hillcrest YCF Powwow and the NARA Boo Bash. We encourage new members to join this Adult Class; however participants must attend class to participate in trips.

We look forward to future events and will continue to assist anyone considering recovery. Please know that you are not alone and there is hope and there is help. For more information call Community Counseling at 553-3205.
