Looking at economic aspect of cannabis

Warm Springs Ventures met with community members on two evenings last week to discuss the economic aspect of the legalization of cannabis in Oregon.

Ventures chief executive officer Don Sampson was the facilitator of the meetings. The goal of Ventures is to create jobs and generate revenue for the tribes. Cannabis can now be seen as a potential economic development opportunity, Sampson said.

Ventures' initial research into this area, as approved by Tribal Council, shows an opportunity for significant revenue—more than $13 million net the first year—plus good-paying jobs in the greenhouse or greenhouses.

In summary, the Ventures proposal is:

To develop a tribally owned, operated, regulated and managed tribal cannabis cultivation and extraction facility—possibly producing medical or recreational cannabis, and hemp—on the reservation with retail sales off-reservation with three retail stores in the Portland/Bend market. “This would be accomplished in a highly regulated, safe and controlled environment,” the report says.

At that time, Council approved the Cannabis Exploratory Team, a group looking at economic opportunities of the legalization of cannabis, and the legal aspects of cannabis on the reservation.

The team met with business and agriculture staff from Strainwise, based in Colorado. Strainwise is one of the largest legal marijuana cultivators and retailers in the country, with over 130,000 square feet of cultivation, and nine retail locations.

The Ventures will present the information gathered at the community meetings to Tribal Council, and they will discuss what the next steps should be.

Budget meetings in Oct.

Tribal Council has posted a proposed budget for 2016, and will hold district meetings on the proposal this month.

The Agency District meeting is scheduled for Monday, Oct. 26. The Seekseequa District meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 27.

And the Simnasho District meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Oct. 28. For these meetings, dinner is at 6 meetings start at 7 p.m.

Tribal members will receive a budget mailer soon, describing the details of the 2016 proposal.

There is some additional revenue in the 2016 proposal. Part of this is due to the carbon sequestration program, developed over the past year by Tribal Council, Warm Springs Ventures, and the Branch of Natural Resources.

Ventures chief executive officer Don Sampson said he is confident the carbon sequestration program will generate new revenue for the tribes in 2016.

Carbon credits can be sold to California companies that are required by law to limit the emission of carbon into the atmosphere.

The Power and Water Enterprises dividend for 2016 would be the same as for the current year, as would that of Composite Products.

The Indian Head Casino dividend would see an increase; and Credit would also provide a dividend. Reservation Timber, providing trust revenue, would see a decrease, from $2.85 million to $2.5 million.

The Utilities Department would see an increase in its budget under the 2016 proposal.

The Senior Pension Fund would see an increase, ensuring its stability through the following year. The 2016 proposal includes an increase to the Revenue Reserve Fund. These were priorities for Tribal Council members during the budget planning process.

While there are no reductions in workforce in the budget proposal, the Tribal Council and Committees budget would see a decrease in 2016, as would Finance. The budget for per capitas would be the same as for the current year. The budget for per capitas would be the same as for the current year.

New positions in the organization would be that of grant writer, and internal auditor, working through the Secretary-Treasurer's office.

Member art show opens Oct. 29

The Tribal Member Art Show at the Museum at Warm Springs will celebrate its Twenty-Second Anniversary in October. The show opens on October 29, and will run through early January in the museum Changing Exhibits gallery.

Council, WSFPI, BIA meet again on mill

The complicated matter of the Warm Springs Forest Products Industries mill was at Council twice last week.

The first Council meeting was with BIA officials, and the second was with the WSFPI management and board.

The issue is complicated because of the finances at the mill, and the jobs. No one in a decision-making capacity wants to see the mill close, as about 60 tribal members are working there.

Meanwhile, though, the BIA cannot approve timber sales unless the Confederated Tribes receive a fair value for the logs. WSFPI relies exclusively on reservation timber.

In the past, WSFPI missed some payments to the tribes. This summer WSFPI, Tribal Council and the BIA set up a three-year repayment plan.

These back payments are in addition to payments for any new timber harvests.

The agreement is that WSFPI will make all payments to the tribes on time. A missed payment means the BIA will stop timber sales, effectively shutting down the mill.

Preparing for any worst-case scenario, the BIA last week presented Tribal Council with a plan that would apply if the mill at some point were no longer able to take tribal timber.

The plan will be incorporated into the Council resolution regarding the future operation of the mill.

A basic element of the plan is that tribal timber would be sold on the open market at a fair price, if WSFPI cannot make payment.

John Halliday, Warm Springs BIA Agency superintendent, and Ken Borchert, from the BIA regional office, made the presentation to Council.

Timber is a trust asset of the Confederated Tribes, funding, for instance, the Senior Pension Fund. The BIA by law cannot approve the sale of a trust asset when the tribe does not receive fair market value in the transaction.

The WSFPI board and management met with Tribal Council the following day, giving a quarterly fi-

Rise & Shine at Eagle Academy

Mornings at the Warm Springs Eagle Academy start with the Rise & Shine program. Rise & Shine is from 7:40 to 8:50 a.m., and is for all students.

Rise & Shine includes activities for students, including traditional arts and crafts with the Culture and Heritage Department.

While the students are taking part in Rise & Shine, the teachers and other staff are using the time for planning and training. School Principal Ken Parshall initiated this program as a school improvement strategy. Lana Leonard is the program coordinator. In other recent school news:

hand for the meeting were Principal Parshall, district superintendent Rick Molitor, and 509-J board vice chairwoman Laurie Danzuka.

They talked about the new grading system at the high school. The new system uses numbers: 4 for mastery; 3 for proficient; 2 for developing; 1 for beginning; and F for no effort.

For testing, if a student takes four tests, the scores are averaged, but the most weight (60 percent) is put on the last test.

Education agreement

The school district and the tribes are working toward a new long-term education agreement.

The current agreement ends next year. Council members have said they would like to see some specific items in the new agreement that can be used to measure the success of the district and the tribal member students. Tribal Council and school officials are planning to meet again in November regarding the agreement.

A Visit with the Governor

Oregon Gov. Kate Brown was in Warm Springs last week, for a meeting with the Tribal Council. The governor stopped by the Council administrative offices and met with staff Alfredine Smith, Emily Yazzie, Becky Picard and Norma Miller.

Gov. Kate Brown visited Warm Springs last week, meeting with Tribal Council in an executive session. Agenda items included off-reservation hunting rights, nullification of the bogus 1865 “treaty,” the marijuana equity issue, and the general relationship between the state and Oregon tribes. This was an excellent relationship-building session, said Louie Pitt Jr., tribal Governmental Affairs director. The parties agreed to work on solutions better clarifying rules for both the tribes and

Skills class graduates at Voc Rehab

Warm Springs Vocational Rehabilitation held the Employment and Life Skills Training Academy, with ten students completing the program. Human Resources-Workforce Development, and the Community Action Team are partners in the program. Jolene Estimo, director of Voc Rehab, James Halliday and Melinda Poitra were the session facilitators. The training academy is taught in five sessions, with the final session ending with graduation, held at the Family Resource Center. Session one focused on goal setting, including career exploration, a Holland interest inventory, and skills and experience inventory. The Holland interest inventory is designed to help the students in choosing a career that best suits the individual’s personality and interests. Having a job that matches the person’s interests is important for long-term success in a career, Jolene explains. Session two included a presentation by Anita Davis from the Community Health Education Team. She talked about appearance, and self-concepts. Jolene talked about networking, and how to give an “elevator speech,” or how a job-seeker can quickly and accurately summarize his or her interests and jobs. Session three of the program focused on building relationships, non-verbal communication, making friends, and group decision-making. For session four, Cheryl Tom of Human Services talked about work ethics and problem solving. This session, held at the Central Oregon Inter-governmental Council office, also helped the students to create resumes and cover letters. Session five was on social skills, role playing and skill building, with Suzi

Water quality

Washington Gov. Inslee has signaled a new direction for water quality standards in Washington State, marking a major victory for the Pacific Northwest and its residents.

Washington's announced approach will be a key component to regional, unified efforts to address pervasive water quality problems that plague our region and threaten fish populations and their recovery.

The tribes are committed to working with the state of Washington and the governor to implement fair and effective standards that are not an excessive burden on the economy.

I truly believe that by working together we can begin to take on the monumental task of cleaning our rivers and streams. Our waterways are all connected, and give us the fish that have sustained us since time immemorial.

It is our duty to safeguard their health and vitality now and for the next seven generations. Washington's proposed approach to revising its water quality standards is a long-needed step in the right direction.

A look back in tribal history

(In October of 1915, Central Oregon celebrated the Central Oregon Fairs, in Tumalo, Prineville, Sisters and Redmond. The notice of the upcoming events stated the following.)

Special attractions which heretofore have not been seen by people of Central Oregon, including sensational balloon ascensions daily and nightly, fireworks and street attractions, many of which come directly from the state fair.

Negotiations were completed recently with the Warm Springs Indians to entertain the crowds with their characteristic parades and war dances...

(The following is an account that appeared in the late summer 1904 Bend Bulletin.)

About a hundred Indians from the Warm Springs Agency are drifting through Bend on their way to the Willamette Valley to pick hops. About 50 have gone through in the past week and as many more are said to be on the road.

Old Chief Howard and his retinue are among them. On their way back they will get a supply of huckleberries in the mountains and they have extra ponies along to carry the berries. Incidentally the Indians sell baskets, gloves, etc., of their own make...

(This item, regarding a toll bridge on the reservation, appeared in a 1907 edition of the Madras Pioneer.)

As there are no available funds for building a bridge across the Warm Springs River on the reservation, that project is necessary abandoned for the present, and it is likely that Superintendent Covey will make an effort to secure an appropriation by the present Congress for that purpose.

Under the regulations governing Indian reservations it is required that all county roads and bridges on the reservation shall be maintained and kept in repair by the counties in which the roads are located...

As the bridge across the Warm Springs River is an important one, Superintendent Covey Has prepared estimates of the cost and will submit them to the Indian office, with the recommendation that appropriation be made for the purpose of building the bridge, and that the government collect a toll until such time as the appropriation has been repaid.

Charlotte Agnes Pitt, Keemsah and Sugar, May 21, 1941-October 1, 2015

Charlotte Agnes Pitt, also known as Keemsah and Sugar, passed away on October 1, 2015.

Charlotte passed away from an aggressive form of metastatic cancer. She was in Warm Springs en route to High Lookee. She had been at the Madras St. Charles hospital awaiting a hospice room for two days, as the family did not have medical equipment to treat her comfortably in the final days at home.

While in the hospital she received the wonderful services of friends and family who came to comfort her with the traditions she loved.

The drums resounded from her room clear to the emergency entrance. Staff said it brought comfort to all. They were beautiful services.

Charlotte was born in Portland, Oregon on May 21, 1941 to Lewis Edwards Pitt (Warm Springs/Yakama or Wasco/WishXam/Watlala) and Elizabeth Thompson Pitt (Warm Springs or Mileethlama/Wyampum).

Siblings who survive Charlotte were born in Warm Springs. They are Lillian Pitt and Louie Pitt Jr.

Charlotte grew up in a section of housing located at the Warm Springs Agency called Hollywood.

In fishing season her family lived at Celilo Village where her father and uncle George “Bunky” Pitt II fished.

Many fond memories of Celilo and Hollywood were the source of her wit, physical strength, and baseline of her familial traditional wisdom.

“Once you walked outside your door, you were everyone’s child.” For example there was an elder that the children tried to stay out of line of sight. If spotted, you hauled her wood, packed her water, emptied her latrine pot, and swept her floors.

She would line up the children who helped and tap her cane on the ground and sing for them. She would say, “Dance! Dance harder!” This was a duty not a chore.

She received her nickname Sugar after Sugar Ray Robinson, the “pound for pound” boxer. Sugar Pitt was a fighter. Tussles went on between Columbia River villages and on the streets of Portland Skid Row. Charlotte was a tough fighter and she kept standing no matter how many jumped her. Many think, as an elder, she made any scolding seem sweet, thus Sugar made sense.

She eventually lived in Madras, and went to Madras High School and on to Mt. Angel Academy, where she met her eldest daughter, Elizabeth Woody’s father, Guy Woody (Navajo), a railroad worker and welder. She met Lester LaBonte (Clatsop/Tillamook) in the mid-sixties. He is the father of her youngest daughter Jolene Pitt. He was a logger and laborer. Both daughters survive her.

In the 1970s Charlotte sobered up during the most tumultuous and amazing times of civil rights and Native rights. She met a group of social activists who formed the first free clinic in Skid Row, supported the United Farm Workers, and various other groups in the early coalitions on the West Coast civil rights and radical social activist movement, to protest and work for change.

This includes the United Indians of All Tribes Foundation, who formed the first spiritual walk from Seattle to Alcatraz. The “Movement” also took over the military facility now called the Day-break Star Cultural Center.

She knew first hand the people who were involved in the fishing rights struggle. They were people who made change happen and created organizations we now consider standard, but did not exist prior to the actions of brave persons who faced jail, beatings, nerve gas and brutality.

For example, the first AIM house in Portland was her home. The FBI parked outside 24/7. Also, during this time, when Charlotte showed up in the mayor’s office, he would say, “Give her whatever she wants. Get her out of here.” She was the tenacious go-to person, obtained funding, and spoke out against injustice. All without needing glory or recognition for it.

The most notable activity in Charlotte’s life was becoming the first Native woman counselor at NARA at its start. She also served on its board, and was the only woman on the founding board of the Urban Indian Center. This was one of the first Urban Indian Centers in the country.

She also wrote a grant for the Sweathouse Lodge of CISCO located at Corvallis.

It was the first ever treatment center that proposed traditional Native healing practices for treatment of American Indian peoples. In this grant, she wrote in a paid position for a traditional Native practitioner/healer. This was in concert with many people now considered elders in American Indian mental health treatment.

In this period she also worked with Al Smith, along with many other activists, to push for the American Indian Religious Freedom act that we enjoy today.

Charlotte believed in American Indian religious freedom. She came home to her family who lived at Dry Creek, and started the personal spiritual journey within the practices of her mother’s lineage.

This provided solace during the difficult years, such as the years of incarceration for DUIIs due to periodic bouts of alcoholism. She faced a hard set of circumstances upon release. She lost her house and car, and her daughters were distressed. Personal healing became a priority to set right her children’s future health.

Many times she fell, and still got up. She made efforts others would have avoided. She eventually attained a Bachelor of Science degree from Portland State University.

Charlotte initially supported her studies with Pell grants, selling plasma, and bingo.

At her graduation, she groused about President Clinton ruining it as commencement speaker because of security. She jiggered after receiving her diploma and local news aired her dance that evening.

She continued work as an alcohol and drug counselor, level II. She worked for the Confederated Tribes of Siletz, and for other drug treatment clinics in Portland. Eventually, Charlotte returned to NARA as a counselor.

There are many people who say Charlotte Pitt saved their lives. One person proclaimed thousands of people benefitted from the tough, loving, and strong personal will of this woman.

They continue her legacy, as do her daughters, believing in the power of love; especially in the ongoing strength of our people that means one must never give up. She came “home to die,” as she said, and found people still needed her. She worked until her illness took all of her strength at the Warm Springs Counseling Center. She was 74 years old.

Her family asks if you wish to honor her, promise to live an Indian life, no drugs, alcohol or other harmful behavior, or at least promise to do so. Strive to be happy, look back at your mistakes to learn, laugh and love yourself.

We never know what one given half a chance will be. Charlotte not only loved all children, but also was an avid animal lover. Her fur family, Chong, Kita, Baby Girl and Tippy Tail, also survive her.

Gardens yield plenty of produce

OSU Extension has been busy this summer, growing a garden and providing educational classes.

Extension employees Scott Duggan and Rosanna Sanders, working with tribal members kept a garden, grew a variety of fruits and vegetables.

This was the OSU demonstration garden and the Warm Springs Community garden. They used raised beds at the demonstration garden.

The raised beds are an advantage, as the soil heats up earlier in the spring, and the ground is easier to weed than traditional garden plots.

In the Warm Springs community garden they grew corn, watermelon, pumpkins and other vegetables.

Edmund Francis manages the Warm Springs community garden, and was helpful in securing a plot for OSU to grow more food than the smaller demonstration garden would allow.

Edmund also handled all the irrigation for the garden, a big help to OSU and the tribal members who have garden plots.

The two gardens were not only used to grow food but functioned as a learning laboratory as well.

Produce from the garden.

Classes subjects included soils, composting, cool and warm season veggies, and container gardening, to name a few. To complement these classes, Extension hosted a lunch and learn series of gardening classes on Tuesdays in August. This was organized by OSU faculty and staff Bethann Beamer, Sara Rogers, Rosanna Sanders and Andrea Sapuay.

The students were pleased with what they learned in these classes, in addition to eating some tasty food grown in the two gardens.

At last count the produce from the gardens weighed in at over 200 pounds, and was donated to tribal members.

Tribes establishing TERO Commission

The Tribal Council has established the Tribal Employment Rights Office Commission.

The commission will oversee the operation of the tribal TERO office, a branch of Warm Springs Ventures.

This will be a five-member commission, appointed by Tribal Council.

Any Indian 18 years and older who works or resides on the reservation is qualified to be appointed to the commission.

The commission shall elect annually a chairperson from its membership. The chairperson shall preside at all meetings of the commission, and shall be authorized to sign required documents in accordance with the powers of the commission.

Duties and Powers-The commission shall be responsible for conducting hearings on Tribal Employment Rights matters in accordance with this code. The commission will have duties as set out in the establishing document, and will meet monthly.

Submit letter of interest and resume, no later than noon, Nov. 13, to:

Glendon Smith, S/T-CEO

Tribes contracting for water meter study

Tribal Council heard a report from tribal Utilities and Planning on the water meter project.

A current grant is paying for an assessment and recommendation plan for the tribes' domestic water system.

This report will then be used to apply for a larger grant that would fund the actual installation of water meters on all residential and commercial buildings that use the water system.

This project could add several years of use to the current water treatment plant, said Utilities director Don Courtney.

A major upgrade of the treatment plant will cost millions of dollars, so extending its life would mean a significant savings for the tribes, he

D. McMechan/Spilyay

The water meter project would add years to the life of the treatment plant, located on the Deschutes River.

The water meter project will allow Utilities to monitor where the water is going once it leaves the treatment plant.

Some of the water is apparently leaking into the ground from broken pipes, Courtney said.

A study found that the treatment plant produces about 39,500 gallons of water per year per residential hook-up. This would be about five times the national average.

The average Warm Springs household is most likely not using this amount of water, so there must be significant leakage in the system, Courtney said.

Making the water system more efficient, and using less water, would extend the life of the treatment plant.

Roy Spino, water-wastewater engineer, said that about 200 residences in the Warm Springs area have water meters. But these are not read on a regular basis, as Utilities does not have the manpower, and the information would be of limited use.

The plan is install meters on all of the approximately 1,400 connections, and possibly implement a rate system.

The meters will show where leaks are in the system, and the rate system would encourage water conservation.

Spino said that over the summer, when the treatment plant was not at full capacity, the tribes encouraged residents to conserve water. The people responded well, giving Utilities the time to fix the treatment plant, Spino said.

Tribal Planner Lonny Macy said the tribes are currently seeking requests for proposals to carry out the water system assessment. Once this is complete, the tribes can use the report to apply for a USDA and other funding to complete the meter project.

Station, advisory board Oct. meeting

KWSO will hold a meeting with its Community Advisory Board on Friday, Oct. 23 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Media Center

There will be a report and an opportunity for feedback to help identify how to engage the community and provide public service.

Anyone interested in the Community Advisory Board can contact KWSO station manager Sue Matters at 541-553-1968; or email: sue.matters@wstribes.org

First compliance contract with Warm Springs TERO office

by Mary Sando-Emboolah
W.S. TERO officer

The Warm Springs Tribal Employment Rights Office is moving forward, getting ready for construction work on the reservation.

The Warm Springs TERO office has signed their first compliance agreement on a contract with Walker River Construction, a Native American company located in Schurz, Nev.

Walker River Construction is doing work with the Warm Springs Fish Hatchery, replacing salmon ponds and domestic water systems.

The first compliance fees totaled over $70,000. These fees support the TERO Office.

The main purpose of the Warm Springs TERO office is to get Native American construction workers hired for local construction projects, on or near the Warm Springs Reservation.

The office works to prevent discrimination, gain preference in contracting and subcontracting for Native Americans, and to make sure the Indian workforce on the reservation is trained and equipped for employment of their choosing.

Walker River Construction is Native American owned, and is employing Native American workers, satisfying the tribal employment requirement.

The compliance agreement with Walker River Construction is the first of many to come for the Warm Springs TERO office.

The office is gearing up for the 2016 construction season, which will include construction work on and off of the reservation.

The Confederated Tribes are in the process of finalizing an memorandum of understanding with the Oregon Department of Transportation.

Once this agreement is in place, with our TERO region determined, any ODOT road projects that fall within our region will be subject to compliance with TERO requirements.

Non-ODOT construction work on the reservation is required to comply with TERO requirements. This includes work contracted by tribal enterprises.

Once we are ready to begin referring workers to any construction jobs, we will select workers to be dispatched to contractors using a TERO skills survey.

The Warm Springs TERO office has skills surveys available for those interested in job placement, once jobs are available. The surveys are used to match workers' skills with appropriate job opportunities requested by construction contractors.

The skills surveys will be good for one year, being re-submitted every January to keep all information current.

A sign-in sheet will also be used to track individuals interested in construction jobs on or near the reservation.

Job survey forms, construction department job applications and sign-in sheet are available at the front desk of the Warm Springs Ventures/construction office.

Also in preparation for the upcoming construction season we have identified local training opportunities available through various tribal programs.

Warm Springs Higher Education will assist those wanting to get vocational training to learn to operate heavy equipment, to drive a truck, and get a CDL license. Higher education will fund vocational school one time.

Higher Education has a July 1 deadline for applications annually. For more information about vocational or higher education through college, contact the Higher Education at 541-553-3311.

IDA

The Warm Springs Community Action Team has the Individual Development Account (IDA) program. They currently have a five-to-one match through grant programs.

If you invest $25, they will match it with $125, making it easier to save to attend school, buy equipment and attend training for work placement.

The program can also help you save money to start a business or buy a home. For more information contact the Community Action Team at 541-553-3148.

WIOA

The Workforce Innovation Opportunity Act Program provides assistance to Native Americans who are unemployed, underemployed, in need of retraining due to lay-off, or those who are low income.

WIOA partners with Warm Springs Vocational Rehabilitation for the employment and life skills training academy, covering information to get participants in the workforce.

WIOA offers a variety of job and educational services to clients 17 and older. The program also provides services for youth ages 14–21. For more information, contact the Workforce Innovation Opportunity Act program 553-3324.

Voc Rehab

Warm Springs Vocational

Rehabilitation Program can provide assistance with vocational training, tools, equipment and licenses, referrals to substance abuse treatment centers, job direction and assistance in attaining job skills.

Vocational Rehabilitation has eligibility requirements. The program hosts orientation at 3 p.m. every Monday at their office at the industrial park. They also have orientation on the first Thursday of every month at the Bestcare building in Madras, and on the third Thursday of the month at the NARA outpatient building in Portland. For more information call 541-553-4952.

COIC, COCC, Madras employment services and other support services are available to assist with potential barriers to employment.

As we move closer to the beginning of the construction work season, the Warm Springs TERO office will have some trainings offered, as well as a local jobs fair. For more information stop by the TERO office, or call 541-615-0853.

In the spring of 2005, Jim Miller, a Native spiritual leader and Vietnam veteran, found himself in a dream riding on horseback across the great plains of South Dakota. Just before he awoke, he arrived at a riverbank in Minnesota and saw 38 of his Dakota ancestors hanged. At the time, Jim knew nothing of the largest mass execution in United States history, ordered by Abraham Lincoln on December 26, 1862.

Dakota 38 +2 retraces the 330-mile route of his dream on horseback from Lower Brule, South Dakota to Mankato, Minnesota to arrive at the hanging site.

This is the story of their journey- the blizzards they endure, the Native and Non-Native communities that house and feed them along the way, and the dark history they are beginning to wipe away.

After the showing of the film, Jim Miller and Alberta Ironcloud will speak and answer questions from the audience.

Supreme Court to hear tribal cases

The U.S. Supreme Court has scheduled oral arguments in two Indian law cases.

Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin v. US will be heard December 1. The case will determine how far back the Indian Health Service must go to pay the Menominee Nation of Wisconsin for contract support costs in self-determination contracts.

Dollar General Corporation v. Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians will be heard on December 7. The case will determine whether Dollar General, a publicly-traded company with $17.5 billion in revenues can avoid the jurisdiction of the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians.

The Supreme Court has accepted a third case, Nebraska v. Parker. The case will determine the whether the boundaries of the reservation of the Omaha Tribe of Nebraska have been diminished. Oral arguments haven't been scheduled. Elsewhere:

Schimmel sisters

The Omaha Tribe of Nebraska welcomed basketball stars Shoni Schimmel and Jude Schimmel to the reservation in October.

The Schimmel sisters hosted a basketball clinic for youth at the Umonhon Nation Public School in Macy, KTIV reported. Along with their parents, they also showed the critically-acclaimed Off The Rez documentary.

ECE taking Halloween candy

ECE is asking for Halloween Candy Donations for its annual Pumpkin Parade on Friday, October 30. Donations of any packaged, nut-free candy can be dropped of at the ECE front desk.

Community notes

The National Indian Education Association Powwow is coming up on Saturday, October 17 at the Oregon Convention Center in Portland. There is Gourd Dance at 6 p.m., and the Social Powwow is from 7-11. All drums and dancers are welcome.
